New Business

- 1. Wood-Pawcatuck Flood Resiliency Management Plan's impact on Wild and Scenic Study

 - b. Suggestion made that we should get out positive publicity about the W&S as soon as possible.
 - i. Get website up in Jan
 - ii. Committee members could go before town committees to update them on the Committee's progress.
 - iii. Get local newspapers involved
- 2. Review of Study Committee's requirements to fulfill NPS directive from Congress
 - a. There are no regulations concerning how to break up segments, although NPS feels that the report is better received by congress if the rivers are not too chopped up
 - i. It's best to choose the best classification that fits in the longest stretch.
 - ii. However, exceptions can be made if there is good reason.
 - b. Suggest the subcommittees start a draft and see how everything looks on paper
 - c. NPS will start drafting their report regarding river reaches and classifications now with the information that will be coming from subcommittees
 - d. Two documents will come out of this – a report to congress and management plan
 - e. Tributaries should not be included in the designation because that can weigh down the regulatory process
 - i. Instead, details of important tributaries could be covered in the management plan
 - f. Dams need not affect classification as long as they are small and/or historic
 - i. If necessary dams could be excluded from designation – for example for hydroelectric projects
- 3. Using sensitive information in final report
 - a. NPS will have us follow guidance from SHIPO and State Natural Heritage Programs as to how display this information in reports
- 4. Subcommittee guidance
 - a. Can use other local resources on the subcommittees – make sure they are credited

 - a. Denise discussed the project under permitting at the Bradford Dam on the Pawcatuck River. The Nature Conservancy is proposing to remove the dam and install a rock ramp for fish passage using Super Storm Sandy Resilient Communities Grant funds.
 - b. This is the type of project that NPS and the Study Committee will need to review. Jamie will contact the Army Corp of Engineers to have them send us the information.
